

BRIEFINGS

FROM THE QUAYLE VICE PRESIDENTIAL LEARNING CENTER

A QUAYLE FAMILY VISIT

The Quayle Center had the pleasure of welcoming its namesake, Vice President Dan Quayle, back for a visit in late July. The former Veep came back to Huntington for a visit along with his son, Ben, his wife, Tiffany and their children, Evie, Willa and Torie.

The Quayles met with friends from the DQCF board and staff at Nick's Kitchen for stories and tenderloins before walking to the Center for a tour of the facility.

A warm welcome greeted the Quayle Family as they entered the Center with more friends waiting for them. The Vice President gave a quick and cordial interview with a waiting TV crew, as the rest of the family began exploring throughout the facility.

SPECIAL EDITION: FALL 2022

Wandering around the Center, the Vice President took special delight in pointing out various items to his granddaughters. They, in turn, seemed to love all the photos of their grandfather. They even insisted on having their own photo taken with the cut-out of him in the front lobby.

Ben and Tiffany spent a lot of time reading and examining the various artifacts in the Center while Executive Director Daniel Johns explained the different school programs to Vice President Quayle. Near the end of their visit, the girls eagerly discovered the gift shop.

After spending quite a while in the Center, everyone gathered at the front steps for group photos, and reminisced a bit more before the Quayle family set out on foot to walk back to downtown to explore a bit more.

It was very good to see our friends again. Even though the Quayles now live in Arizona, the questions, conversations and reminiscing during the visit quickly returned to Huntington and the people here.

Thank you to the Quayle Family - We look forward to our next meeting and catching up again!
